DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 1-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

In claim 1, line 9, the “inner lower side” has not been adequately defined in relative orientation with respect to other aspects of the claimed invention.

In claim 1, lines 13-14, the phrase “elastic press wheel...base plate” appears to be inconsistent with what is actually shown in the drawings, since the drawings show the wheel being pressed against the button.

In claim 1, lines 26-27, “the opposite side” is not fully understood in the context of the claim language. What opposite sides are being referred to?

In claim 4, it is not fully understood exactly what structure “its opposite edges” is referring to. Such edges have not been clearly defined. Also, it is not clear if “a tightening bolt” is referring to that of claim 1, or a different bolt.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1 and 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over European Patent EP 000599254 A1 ('254) in view of Bereza, US Patent 5,410,771. Patent '254 discloses essentially the claimed invention, including a clamp base (3, 8), elastic press unit (5, 9, 6), and bottom base 1. The press unit is located within a groove in the bottom portion of the clamp base and in claim press wheel 6. The base has two ears and rotary button 13, as claimed. Stiffening members are provided near opposite ends of a rod (or pin) 2 (as seen in figure 1). Means for adjusting the rotary positioning of the button is shown at 14 and 15.

The device of '254 discloses the claimed invention except for explicit teaching of the particular type of adjusting means claimed, including a fixing rod and locking bolts, as claimed. Bereza teaches the general concept of allowing for adjusting using a locking bolt, which is well known as a means for providing desired adjustment; and as also evidenced by Gregral et al., US Patent 6,532,711, Johnson, US Patent 3,604,044. It would have been obvious at the time the invention was made for one skilled in the art to have included in the design of '254 such a modification, for the purpose of allowing for an alternative way to achieve desired adjustment.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over European Patent EP 000599254 A1 ('254) in view of Bereza. The combination discloses the claimed invention except for the material claimed. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified the device in this way, since it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a known material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice. In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416. See also Ballas Liquidating Co. v. Allied industries of Kansas, Inc. (DC Kans) 205 USPQ 331. Such a modification is not critical to the design and would have produced no unexpected results.

Allowable Subject Matter

7. Claims 2 and 3 would be allowable if rewritten to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, 2nd paragraph, set forth in this Office action and to include all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
